Flooding, storm drain costs dismay residents

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

Residents of still-rural northwest Upland don't like runoff cascading down Mountain and Wilson Avenues, flooding streets and homes in a heavy downpour, but they also don't like the idea of paying a high price to divert its flow.

With an estimated cost of $87,000 for each 10 acres, excluding interest on a 15-year bond issue, one resident described the proposed $2.6 million storm drain as a "Cadillac" project.

No cheap imports are available as substitutes, city flood control experts told Upland's City Council on Monday night, during a two-hour hearing on the city's first storm drain assessment district.

"We don't have a solution short of building a storm drain," City Engineer Fred Blanchard said.

He said severe storm damage would result if residential development were to occur in the area, generating 10 times the current runoff. The alternative is prohibiting development, he cautioned.

The sole drain in the area dotted by still-harvested citrus groves is a dirt ditch along 20th Street that now fails to contain water from a major storm, Blanchard said.

With last week's destructive, wind-driven rain-storm still fresh in their minds, about half of the 27 property owners who divide up the 300-acre section offered their opinions Monday night.

No one disagreed that something is needed. But property owners representing 36 percent of the area disliked its cost, and disagreed over what type of drain system should be built, and who should have to pay for it.

Property owners with suggestions were urged to join a committee and help shape the project's design and possible alternatives by next June, and to present a staunch defense in asking the county of San Bernardino for assistance.

About a third of the runoff descends into the city from county territory, Blanchard said. Most residents believed the county should pay for its share of the problem.

However, Upland has "not been too successful" in hammering out participation agreements between it and the county, City Manager Lee Travers said.

Ironically, an initial hearing over the plan was postponed awaiting the outcome of the November election where a special flood control assessment district taking in most of the West Valley was envisioned. Voters defeated it.

Councilwoman Dina Hunter half-heartedly offered yet another possible solution: redevelopment.

A redevelopment project area was also dumped during November's balloting.

The Mountaingreen shopping center in Upland will be the temporary home of a mobile post office throughout the holidays.

Postal patrons can buy stamps and mail packages from the truck, manned by Rudy Guzman seven days a week.

Trustee named to post

Donna Vandersall, trustee for the Upland School District, is the newest member of the 11-person County Committee on School District Organization.

Vandersall, also president of the fifth district of the Parent-Teachers Association, was elected Tuesday night in Apple Valley after the minimum 19 voting members of the San Bernardino County School Boards' Association assembled for the election.

Each of the county's school districts were authorized to send a voting member to the election, and 150 reservations were made before Tuesday's inclement weather. But most trustees apparently decided not to attend after the storm, and those who did make it had to wait nearly an hour for the minimum 19 representatives to arrive.

Vandersall, elected to a four-year term, represents the second supervisorial district. The only nominee for the post, she replaced Dale Taylor of Rancho Cucamonga.

Janet Mishodek, representing the county's third supervisorial district, was elected to a second four-year term on the committee.

Jerry Bredlau of Etiwanda, vice chairman of the committee, said this committee meets as needed to conduct studies regarding school board's requests for boundary changes, unification with other districts and like inquiries.

Mobile post office may help reduce long lines in Upland

Accompanying holiday cheer, bell-wringers and festive decorations are maddening, time-consuming lines.

Lines of customers paying for purchases. Lines to pick up boxes. Lines leaving parking lots.

Upland's postmaster is hoping to reduce at least one line that gets more than its share of customers during the holiday season: stamp windows.

To divert a little traffic away from Upland's main post office, Postmaster Anthony Scalise has opened an auxiliary office in one of Upland's busiest shopping centers.

A mobile post office, in what resembles an ice cream truck, will be open seven days a week through Dec. 20 in the Mountaingreen shopping center, Eighth Street and Mountain Avenue.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays.

The main post office, 333 Arrow Highway, will also extend its hours on Saturday and Dec. 18 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Besides selling stamps, patrons can buy envelopes, padded bags and cartons, and send off their packages from the red-and-white awning-draped truck.

For those who are more patient and want to avoid lines altogether, Christmas, religious or traditional stamps can be ordered by mail. Mail carriers will be stuffing order forms in mail boxes in the next week.

Delivery to the North Pole is also guaranteed by Dec. 25 if Santa's correspondents drop their wish-lists in a special red and green collection box in the lobby of Upland's main post office.

Scalise urges shoppers and card senders to mail correctly addressed packages and cards early. Mailers may get specific information on international mailing dates by calling the post office, 981-2824.

About 1.6 million pieces of mail for Upland and Claremont residents are handled by the Upland post office during the holiday weeks, about 600,000 more pieces than the usual amount, the postmaster said.

The former postmaster of La Puente, Scalise said the mobile truck's previous stop was the enclosed La Puente mall. It has not been used in Upland or out-of-doors before, he said.

Children must want to do well in school

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

Children will not do well in school unless they choose to learn, and educators and parents have the responsibility to help children make that choice.

Such was the message from Dr. William Glasser, noted author and lecturer and founder of Reality Therapy, at his talk Tuesday before more than 300 parents and educators.

Teachers and parents cannot force any child to learn, to behave acceptably or to participate, Glasser said. The child must have — or regain — a mental image of doing well in school. He or she will then decide to meet teachers' demands, Glasser said, so as to make reality coincide with that mental picture.

All young children enter school with a mental image of succeeding in school, Glasser said. But if those children fail repeatedly, they learn to replace their picture of success with a picture of being disruptive. They decide to behave in a manner to satisfy their mental image of being disruptive.

It is teachers', parents' and counselors' responsibility to replace a picture of disruption with a picture of success, Glasser said. That is best done by showing children how school can meet their basic needs.

Glasser lists the four basic needs as belonging (love and cooperation), self-esteem (power and competition), fun (freedom) and security (survival). If schools can meet these needs for children without allowing them to "fail," Glasser said, the children will replace or strengthen their mental picture of succeeding in school.

Teachers can include problem children in a simple competition, a contest at which they would not fail. Such activity would meet their need for self-esteem and power without them having to disrupt the class for a feeling of power. Or teachers could include these problem students in fun activities, allowing them freedom from their studies and a sense of belonging to the group.

"We want to belong, we want to share, we want to cooperate," Glasser said of humans in general. "We're terribly afraid of being lonely."

"What kids are concerned about is, do they belong?" he continued. "Any child who feels part of the class ... is not going to disrupt." He suggested that teachers might give those difficult students an occasional treat — away from the rest of the class — to make them feel loved.

Children lose a mental picture of success in school due to failure, Glasser said, so schools should eliminate the possibility of failure. "There is no real reason to fail children in school today," he said. "I'm not in favor of giving students credit for work they do not do ... but failure is a terribly, terribly distressing concept."

He suggested that, instead, schools advance children as soon as they learn. His research has shown that if children are not afraid of failure, he said, they will continue to try to learn. "Once a kid gives up in school, it's increasingly a disaster."

Sometimes, Glasser added, students may have a mental picture of success but they decide to employ a behavior that is inappropriate. They may decide to be upset, miserable or disruptive in the hope that they will get what they want as the result of such behavior. He used the example of a parent using a migraine headache to escape immediate responsibilities, such as making dinner.

"We choose powerful and painful behaviors when we can't get what we want," Glasser said. "We choose behaviors, but we don't always choose effective behaviors."

Maternity leave policy draws state complaint

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

The firing of a West Valley woman who was ineligible for a maternity leave at the Rancho Cucamonga Frito-Lay plant has prompted state officials to file a discrimination complaint against the snack food company.

Sol Pavlosky, of the Department of Fair Employment and Housing's San Bernardino district, said he expects Frito-Lay to contend the state employment law discriminates in reverse, by giving pregnant employees special privileges.

The department said Frito-Lay employees with less than a year of continuous service can be fired if they take a leave of more than two weeks due to disability.

Frito-Lay officials said their policy, allowing two weeks sick leave to an individual employed less than a year, "is in keeping with national legal requirements and with our union contract at the plant."

"If the law specifies something different for women than men, isn't that discriminatory?" Mike Mirarchi, a Frito-Lay attorney in Dallas, said. The subsidiary of Pepsico, Inc., the world's second largest soft drink producer, is based in Texas.

California law requires employers give pregnant workers up to four months leave of absence if their disability is certified by a physician.

The class complaint filed last week may affect up to 5,000 employees in other California Frito-Lay operations in Los Angeles, San Jose and El Segundo and other subsidiaries within the state.

Frito-Lay could be ordered to change its policy, rehire any women fired because of it and give back pay and compensation for damages to discharged employees, Pavlosky said.

The state's complaint arose from one initially filed by a factory worker in the Rancho Cucamonga plant. About half of the 450-member work force are women, the department said.

Ontario and Fontana offer a Santa for rent

The cities of Ontario and Fontana are offering children and parents a unique way to celebrate Christmas, complete with a jolly Santa Claus toting candy canes and gifts.

West Valley parents can rent a Santa Claus from either the Fontana or the Ontario recreation departments.

Santa will visit a home for a half hour in Fontana and 30-45 minutes in Ontario. He can be rented for a $15 charge in Fontana and for a $20 fee in Ontario.

The Santas are available through Christmas Eve, Dec. 24, and must be reserved at the respective city halls. He will bring enough candy canes for 20 children. Any extra candy will be result in an additional fee.

Supervisors sworn in for new terms

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

West Valley Supervisors Robert Townsend and Cal McElwain were sworn in Monday for new four-year terms on the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors.

While their families watched, the supervisors took the oath of office from Andree Disheroon, the clerk to the Board of Supervisors.

Townsend, the senior member of the board in tenure, noted that he has been on board almost nine years now. He was first appointed to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Ruben Ayala, who left the board for the state Senate. Townsend has been re-elected three times and was unopposed this year.

McElwain is starting his second term on the board. After an unsuccessful bid in 1974, he defeated incumbent Joe Kamansky in 1978 and easily won re-election in June this year over two opponents.

Townsend represents the 4th District, including Montclair, Chino and Ontario. McElwain represents the 2nd District, including Upland, Rancho Cucamonga and Fontana.

Each praised his staff, thanked his family and credited employees with making county government work. Both said public-private partnerships will need to be explored more in the future as answers to problems facing the county.

McElwain singled out former local Supervisor Daniel Mikesell as being one of his closest advisers.

SCAG backs train route

A proposed route to take high-speed train service between Los Angeles and Las Vegas through Cajon Pass — with possible stops in the West Valley — has received the blessing of the San Bernardino Associated Governments.

The proposal was backed over an alternative to take the route through the Antelope Valley with a key stop at the proposed Palmdale airport.

Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes, a member of the SANBAG board, has been a strong advocate of the Cajon Pass route.

The proposed train would travel some 250 mph, faster than foreign "bullet" trains.

Valley Community church plans Bethlehem Pageant

"A Maiden Named Mary" is the theme of this year's Bethlehem Pageant, presented by Valley Community Drive-in Church of San Dimas.

This is the sixth annual production of the classic Christmas story of the birth of Jesus produced by the valley church. Separate themes for each year's production emphasize the many important elements of the classic story.

The action of the drama is not limited to inside the church, but occurs inside and outdoors, using the inside lower stage and the balcony, and the outside side lighted area. Action takes place through the large open glass doors, and the outside area is visible through the glass wall of the sanctuary. A living nativity is set outside, and the wisemen and Roman soldiers arrive on horses across the outside drive-in parking lot.

Several music groups and a 30 piece orchestra, under the direction of Phil Munger, Benna Munger and Carol McClung, provide the music for the drama. The music includes new and traditional carols and hymns. The pageant is presented in three acts. First performance Saturday, Dec. 18, at 6 p.m., and two on Sunday, Dec. 19, at 5:30 and 8 p.m.

Tickets are available for a donation of $3.50 or in blocks of 25 at $3 each. Children 3 to 5 years, $1.

The public is invited. The church is located at Lone Hill Avenue and Covina Boulevard in San Dimas.

Toy safety campaign in child health clinics

The holiday season is the time when many parents, relatives and friends purchase toys for children. They anticipate the joy and satisfaction these toys will bring. They do not expect an injury to result from the toy's use.

Not every toy is safe for children to use. According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, half a million children suffer toy-related injuries each year. 175,000 of these children are seriously injured by toys that cut, burn, puncture, shock or choke them. Eighty percent of the toys involved in these injuries are purchased during October, November and December.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, although regulations insure that toys are made safer, only parents can determine which toys come into the home and supervise their use to see that the toys remain safe.

Because so many parents now are buying Christmas toys for their children, the San Bernardino County Department of Public Health's Child Health Program has developed a clinic education campaign to stress toy safety, entitled, "For Kids' Sake, Think Toy Safety." The campaign theme was adapted from materials by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission and chosen to remind parents of important points to keep in mind when buying, repairing and storing toys.

During November and December, nine of the Well-Child Clinics participating in the campaign will be seeing approximately 3,000 children and their parents. When the parents are in the waiting room they will be given information on selecting toys, specifically addressing three points:

1. Sharp edges can cut.
2. Small parts can be inhaled or swallowed.

3. Propelled objects, darts, missiles, rockets and guns that shoot objects, can injure eyes.

At the end of the clinic visit, parents will receive guidelines on selecting safe and creative toys for children ages 0-12, and information on how to make toys at home. Here are some tips to keep in mind when selecting toys:

1. Keep in mind the child's age, interests and abilities. Consider how the child might misuse the toy. Assume he/she will try to take it apart, taste it, stick fingers into it, and throw it.

2. Be a label reader. Look for age recommendations, such as "not recommended for children under three." Look for other safety labels including "non-toxic" on painted toys, "flame retardant/flame resistant" on fabric products and "washable/hygienic materials" on stuffed toys and dolls.

3. Toys for babies should be too large to fit totally into the mouth (1½ inch diameter), easily washable, light in weight and non-breakable.

4. For an infant or small toddler, do not buy toys with long strings, ribbons or loops which can strangle. Toys with loops or ribbons should not be hung in cribs or playpens.

5. Dolls and stuffed animals should not have glass or button eyes which can easily be removed and swallowed.

In selecting a rattle or squeeze toy for an infant or toddler, do not purchase one that has small parts inside. These pieces are dangerous if the toy is broken and the small pieces are swallowed or inhaled.

6. Adult lawn darts, or other toys with sharp edges should never be purchased for children. Arrows or darts for children should have tips of soft cork or rubber suction cups which cannot be pulled off. These tips can prevent eye injury. Toys that fly, such as darts, missiles, rockets, rifles, sling shots, archery sets, should only be purchased for older children if they will be used with adult supervision.

7. Electrical toys are only recommended for children over eight years of age. Purchase toys approved by the Underwriters' Laboratory. Many of these toys will require parental supervision.

The Child Health Program provides well-child check-ups to children and youth 0-21 on Medi-Cal with a current P.O.E. (proof of eligibility) sticker, and to all children 0-6. Children under 6 from low-income families may receive these check-ups for free. A fee service is charged to all other children.

The following local clinics are participating in the special Toy Safety Education Program:

West Valley Health Center, 320 E. D St., Ontario, Ca. 91764. Phone: 988-1312.

Chino Health Center, 13260 Central, Chino, Ca. 91710. Phone: 628-2914.

For more written information on toy safety and creative toys, call the San Bernardino County Department of Public Health's Child Health Program at 383-1542.

Winds of up to 85 mph toppled large trucks along the Devore Freeway this morning near the Summit Avenue overcrossing in the Fontana area. No one was injured but the trucks and their contents were badly damaged.

Winds up to 85 mph topple trucks, trees

Winds of up to 85 mph toppled tractor-trailer trucks and trees and brought rain to the West Valley and snow to the mountains Wednesday.

Although the gusts were reaching only about 40 mph in the Ontario area, gusts were hitting 80 mph at Rialto Airport, said Lt. Ron Hittle of the Sheriff's Aviation Division, based there.

One gust hit 85 mph, he added. And the Fontana Fire Department reported gusts between 70 mph and 80 mph.

Because high winds are expected all day, a traffic advisory has been issued for the entire county, advising campers and large trucks to stay off the roads, said California Highway Patrol Officer Tony Scott.

The National Weather Service said the wind would continue all day but would be less intense today.

The snow level was 4,000 feet Wednesday morning, according to the CHP. Chains were required at the higher elevations of Mt. Baldy Road, in the Cajon Pass and in the Big Bear and Running Springs areas.

For the most part, the damage caused by the wind was less than the West Valley suffered in last week's wind and rain. But some structures and trees that had survived last week succumbed during the night and the morning, and the winds took their toll in the Fontana and Etiwanda areas.

Southern California Edison attributed outages affecting up to 30,000 customers to tree limbs weekend by last week's storm.

Randy Bond, SCE spokesman, said most of the customers were out only a few minutes, and this morning 200 were still out.

The outages started at about 9:30 p.m. and did not affect any particular area more than others, Bond said. They were spread over the entire area served by the Ontario SCE office.

"All customers that we knew of were back up from last week," Bond said. "We'd just recovered from that last one and then we got this one."

The 200 customers who are still without power should be reconnected later today, depending on how bad the wind is today, Bond said.

A tree blocked Foothill Avenue in Rancho Cucamonga for about three hours early this morning, said sheriff's Detective Ed Rhoads. Other damage there was minor, and no one was injured, he said.

In Fontana, the winds were "about as bad as last Tuesday," said Fontana police Lt. Sam Scott.

The 70 to 80 mph gusts blew over trees and power lines and disrupted power in several scattered parts of the city and closing all city schools, Scott said.

"We have quite a few signals that are out, mostly on Sierra Avenue," he said.

Officers working the graveyard shift were held over this morning to help with traffic control.

Two tractor-trailer trucks were blown over by the winds on Interstate 15 in Fontana, said California Highway Patrol Officer Tony Scott.

No one was injured in the accidents, he said, but the trucks and their contents were badly damaged.

And all the Fontana Unified School District schools were closed today, but all other schools in the West Valley were open and operating.

One man in Etiwanda awoke to a horrible noise in his back yard at 3 a.m. today.

Bob Hurst said he at first didn't know what had happened but his wife thought it might have been something wrong with the patio.

"And sure enough, the roof was gone," he said. "Not just part of it, the whole thing."

It was all over the neighborhood this morning, he said.

The sheriff's helicopters, based at Rialto Airport, have been grounded since about 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Hittle said one plane there had been lifted by the wind and slammed into a metal light tower. It was still there, in the tower and off the ground, this morning, he added.

Buffeted by the strong winds, three light planes landed safely at Chino Airport last night, and the airport will remain open today and tonight, said Dan Groves, the airport manager.

The winds caused only minor damage at the airport, he said.

"A few wing tips were banged up, and we lost some shingles from a building," Groves said.

The angle of the winds were causing some problems for the large aircraft at Ontario International Airport, a spokesman said, but were not halting operations this morning.

Christmas trees were blown over on lots along Arrow Highway in La Verne and San Dimas.

About 350 customers in the West End of San Bernardino County and 500 in the Pomona-Covina area were without power Wednesday morning. But electricity was expected to be restored by mid-afternoon.

"All of our major circuits are in operation. Some tap lines were knocked out by falling trees and high winds. Some repairs are needed. But actually we survived the storm very well," said Loren Stone, manager of the Chino-Montclair area.

Some scattered problems existed in the Pomona-Covina area where 12 high-voltage circuits were out for short periods of time. But there were no lines down or transformers affected, said Dave Martin, area manager for Claremont, San Dimas, La Verne and Pomona.

About 100 customers in northwest Pomona were expected to be without power throughout Wednesday morning. But "we don't expect this to be like (last week's) storm — it is rather typical for windy weather conditions," Martin said.

Edison spokesmen said the wind knocked down a 12,000-volt transmission line about 8 p.m. Tuesday, leaving more than 1,900 Glendora customers in the dark for about 30 minutes.

San Dimas voters reject proposed housing project

The Sleepy Hollow housing project in the Via Verde hills was rejected by San Dimas voters, 1,891 to 1,551, Tuesday in a special election.

The majority of the votes against the development of 189 residential units on 107 acres in South Via Verde came from Via Verde voters who cast 1,194 votes against to only 182 votes for the project.

The special election attracted a 53 percent turnout in Via Verde whereas the issue brought out only 10 percent of the registered voters in the remainder of the city.

The City Council had called the special election in response to a referendum petition brought by San Dimas Citizens for Local Control. The petition that the council repeal its action of the past July in approving development of the housing development by the Via Verde Development Co. in a area west of San Dimas Avenue and south of Via Verde.

The committee said the specific plan for the development was contrary to the Single Family Hillside Zone and would allow an increase in building density of more than 400 percent.

Instead of repealing its action, the council decided to place the issue before the voters.

The only councilman to vote against the ordinance allowing the project was Terry Dipple. He said today he is pleased with the results of the election.

"The people in Via Verde would like a compromise between the strict hillside zoning which allows 45 units on 106 acres and what the developer was proposing," he said. "One unit per acre would be acceptable. I'm not against development in Via Verde. It would be up to the developer to come back with a specific plan."

New career guide for men now available

The radical changes in the job market and lifestyles that have already blurred the traditional roles of men and women now confront American males with unprecedented challenges — and opportunities — in defining career goals for the 1980s and beyond.

In fact, instead of choosing and sticking to one career most American men now find they must — or are able to — enter a new career an average of seven times during their working life.

So says Joyce Slayton Mitchell in a first-of-its-kind career guide for men published by the College Board. Ms. Mitchell, author of 14 educational books including a definitive career guide for women, suggests that the rapidly changing job market and generally discouraging employment outlook make it more important than ever for men to be aware of their options when considering initial career choices — as well as the changes they may make during their working life.

From her interviews she found that the phenomenon of multiple mini-careers is so widespread that many men still in their 20s already are in their second or third different jobs. And Mitchell cites a new phenomenon in the job market: the fact that over one-third of the working population makes a career change every year, most of them between the ages of 30 and 59, with an average of 38.

She also suggests that we are coming into a "new age" for young men in this country, in which men would like to integrate family responsibilities, including child care, with their ambitions and their career development in a partnership with their wives. Her book, "Choices and Changes: A Career Guide for Men," encourages men of all ages to rethink their work priorities and shows them how to integrate today's changing life values with career choices.

"Choices and Changes" provides up-to-date and detailed descriptions of nearly 100 careers, including growing fields like accounting, health and computer science, and is based on extensive personal interviews with working men in every part of the country. For each career profile, the author provides a candid look at what the work is really like, as well as important information on education and skills needed; how many men are employed in the field and where they work; what the salaries and future prospects are; related career fields; and sources of further information.

"I Can Be Anything: A Career Book for Women" is a completely new and up-to-date edition of Ms. Mitchell's definitive career guide for women first published by the College Board in 1975.

"I Can Be Anything" profiles the same careers discussed in "Choices and Changes," but is written specifically for and about women in the working world. The author discusses the expanding range of careers open to women today and the special problems faced by women as they pursue their career goals. A list of women's colleges in the United States also is included.

Both books include practical advice on going to college, choosing a major, transferable and saleable skills, the basic steps in career development, the current oversupply of college graduates, and what to do to get a job that is really interesting.

"Choices and Changes: A Career Book for Men" ($9.95) and "I Can Be Anything: A Career Book for Women" ($9.95) are available at bookstores or by mail order from College Board Publications, Dept. E57, Box 886, New York, N.Y. 10101. Checks should accompany the order and be made payable to the College Board.

Reagan's offer of aid to Brazil is defended

President Ronald Reagan's offer of over $1 billion in aid to Brazil last week was defended in Claremont Friday by Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel Jr., who served as deputy secretary of state from February through September.

During a press conference and a talk at Claremont McKenna College, Stoessel also supported Reagan's recent statements about eliminating trade barriers that shut out competitive goods and services.

Both actions, Stoessel said, will eventually help the U.S. economy.

But in discussing the future of Poland and the possibility of arms controls and negotiations with the new leadership in the Soviet Union, the diplomat was more guarded.

Stoessel played major roles in shaping U.S. foreign policy during his 40-year career. He paved the way for President Nixon and Henry Kissinger to visit China. He also led the U.S. mission to the Middle East in April, which led to the return of the Sinai to Egypt in April.

"Brazil, with its 128 million people, is a major market and producer in Latin America. It's important that we continue to improve relationship with the country," Stoessel explained. "The country needs funds right now to correct its economic problems in international monetary affairs."

Stoessel said Brazil is working hard to improve the humans rights of its people. It "has made progress." He added the administration is in favor of lowering import tariffs and free trade.

"To increase protectionism as a means of encouraging U.S. economy is short-sighted," he said. "It won't reduce unemployment and will contribute to higher costs."

He said the U.S. government will continue to pursue lower tariffs in spite of pressure from some sources to increase protection.

Stoessel said the recent conference of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva did offer the background for further negotiations in spite of the fact that no firm agreements were made.

Stoessel declined to predict the future of Poland. "It will depend, in part, on how much the Russians are willing to give."

"It is still a potentially explosive situation. The Poles do not take kindly to Communist rule. But it should be possible to eventually ease some of the tensions."

Stoessel said he believes the rapid change of Soviet leadership to Andropov was possibly preplanned in the wake of Brezhnev's apparently serious illness in March.

"It seems evident that the Soviets wanted to move quickly after Brezhnev's death to fill the leadership gap and to present to the world an image of continuity and decisiveness," the ambassador added.

Stoessel described Andropov as "most qualified of all the possible candidates" for top leadership. He said Andropov is well educated and has had experience in the foreign field through service as ambassador to Hungary. While Andropov was head of the KGB for years, Stoessel said his background is broad.

Stoessel said he has met Andropov on formal occasions while serving as ambassador to Russia.

Joint communications center proposed

Declaring a need for upgraded "crisis communication between the United States and the Soviet Union," Rep. David Dreier, R-35th Dist., has introduced legislation to establish a joint U.S.-Soviet communications and consultation center.

The center, Dreier said, would upgrade the ability of the two nations to communicate during times of crisis and would augment the current U.S.-

Soviet teleprinter hotline.

The teleprinter hotline, established in 1963 by President John Kennedy and renewed by President Richard Nixon in 1971, is not the only means of direct communication between the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union, Dreier said.

The teleprinter was originally designed to flash alerts of imminent or accidental nuclear conflict. It has never been used for that purpose. But it has been used on various other occasions to send messages during times of international tension, such as the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, Dreier noted.

Crisis communication needs to be upgraded, Dreier said, because the hotline does not allow for voice communication. "Messages sent over this system must first be composed, coded and transmitted, then decoded by the other side and translated.

"Needless to say, this is a somewhat time-consuming and bulky system. Moreover, when leaders of both nations are absent from their respective capitols, the hotline may prove to be an even more cumbersome system of communication," Dreier stated.

Dreier's legislation, H.R. 7322, directs the president to negotiate with the Soviet Union for the establishment of a permanent communications-consultation center to be located in an acceptable "third" nation.

The center would be staffed by equal numbers of diplomatic, military and technical personnel from each nation. In the event of a crisis which might lead to conflict, it would allow these persons to confer face-to-face and report timely and accurate assessments of the situation to their respective governments.

The cost of the center would be shared equally by both. It would have no intelligence-gathering capabilities.

Dreier expressed hope that establishment of such a center would bolster negotiations currently under way in both Vienna and Geneva to reduce weapons stockpiles of both nations.

"During this period of leadership transition in the Soviet Union, we have an opportunity to increase our ability to communicate," the congressman said.

The bill has been referred to the House Committee on Foreign Affairs for further consideration.

Learn to be responsible holiday host, hostess

The approaching yuletide season is considered a time when "doing in excess" is the accepted norm.

There will be frantic preparations for family reunions, gift-buying excursions to crowded department stores and parties with friends.

The holidays also are a time when "excess" includes one more helping of pumpkin pie and one more liquor-laced eggnog or glass of champagne for the road.

Arnie Zepel, program director of the Renewal Unit, the alcohol treatment center at Ontario Community Hospital, reminds hosts or hostesses that hospitality means more than simply offering food and alcohol.

Zepel and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism advises the following holiday tips.

1. "Offer more than drinks. When the focal point is liquor, the party is definitely slipping. Stir up a conversation instead of a drink.

2. "Always have a jigger available when guests mix their own drinks. Guests who try to "eyeball" a jigger of booze often end up drinking far more than they should.

3. "If you plan on having a bartender, select one you know will make the drinks "light" and will quietly "cut someone off" when they've had too much.

4. "If you're passing around glasses of champagne, do so at regular intervals. The body can handle about two-thirds of an ounce of alcohol an hour.

5. "Don't double up. Many people pace their drinks so don't serve doubles. Your guests would be drinking twice as much as they have planned.

6. "Don't push drinks. Let a glass become empty before you refill it. And, then don't rush, especially if someone comes up empty too fast. When a guest says "no" to an alcoholic drink, don't insist. Have something non-alcoholic to serve.

7. "If you notice one of your guests drinking too much, do what you can to slow him down. Start a conversation. Offer some food or volunteer to get the next drink and make it light.

'Jogger' was wearing prison clothes

A convict escaped from the California Institution for Men at Chino Monday morning, but was captured a few minutes later as he jogged along Central Avenue in Chino, CIM officials said.

Joseph January, 24, was jogging north along Central Avenue near the prison about 8:30 a.m., Monday, wearing his prison clothes when Chino police officer Russell Briones stopped him, said CIM's spokeswoman, Regina

Briones then determined January had just escaped from the minimum security section at CIM and arrested him, Stephens said.

The escape was the 23rd this year from CIM and his apprehension was the 19th, and the quickest, Stephens said.

CIM officials will refer the escape to the district attorney for prosecution, Stephens said.

$3,500 sought from opponents of redevelopment

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

As promised, the city of Upland is hoping to exact $3,500 in attorneys' fees from a grass-roots anti-redevelopment organization which did not withdraw a pending lawsuit over a referendum after the issue was shot down by voters on Nov. 2.

Upland filed its motion seeking attorneys' fees from redevelopment opponents Maurya Falk and Sharon Kimberlin last week.

The two Upland residents are the backbone of Citizens for Open Government (COG), a citizens' group responsible for placing the city's redevelopment plan before voters and successfully campaigning for its defeat.

In court papers, Upland's redevelopment attorney James Markman said he asked the women's attorney to either dismiss the pending suit or remove it from the court's calendar.

He reasoned that since the suit was moot, as voters defeated Proposition N on the Upland ballot by a 1,500 vote margin, preparing an answer to the citizens' court petition would be "a useless expenditure of time and money."

Monrovia attorney Jules Sandford, counsel to the citizens' group, had not received the city's counter-motion as of today.

He did say, "no one required him to answer. I told (Markman) we would appear and request a hearing date for attorneys' fees."

The citizens' groups petition was all but withdrawn at a court hearing Nov. 15, except for their request for an unspecified amount in attorneys' fees for bringing suit.

Sandford said the suit never would have been filed if the city had granted the citizens' group an extended time under which to file objections as they did for other governmental agencies.

Objections to the city's proposed redevelopment plan could only be filed within a 90-day statute of limitations, he said. The suit seeking to invalidate the plan due to alleged inadequacies was filed prior to the November vote, while none was really needed until ballot results were in, Sandford said.

Because the suit can now have no result, Markman argues no attorneys' fees could be awarded to the petitioners.

Sandford said there are at least three cases to support his claim for attorneys' fees where awards were granted in dismissed suits.

He had earlier estimated the costs of bringing suit between $6,000 and $10,000. The Monrovia law firm has not been paid to pursue COG's suit. An employee of the firm is one of two consultants who have aided COG's campaign.

The battle over attorney's fees will be heard in West Valley Superior Court on Jan. 4.
